Re: Comments of the Christian Legal Society on Proposed Rule 8.4(g)

Dear Chief Justice McGrath and Associate Justices of the Montana Supreme Court:

The Christian Legal Society (“CLS”) is a non-profit, interdenominational association of Christian attorneys, law students, and law professors, networking thousands of lawyers and law students in all 50 states since its founding in 1961. CLS’s membership includes attorneys who practice in Montana, as well as a law student chapter at the University of Montana Alexander Blewett III School of Law.

Among its many activities, CLS engages in two nationwide public ministries through its Christian Legal Aid ministry and its Center for Law & Religious Freedom. Demonstrating its commitment to helping economically disadvantaged persons, the goal of CLS’s Christian Legal Aid program is to meet urgent legal needs of the most vulnerable members of our society. CLS provides resources and training to help sustain approximately 60 local legal aid clinics nationwide. This network increases access to legal aid services for the poor, the marginalized, and the victims of injustice in America. Based on its belief that the Bible commands Christians to plead the cause of the poor and needy, CLS encourages and equips individual attorneys to volunteer their time and resources to help those in need in their communities.

Demonstrating its commitment to pluralism and the First Amendment, for forty years, CLS has worked, through its Center for Law & Religious Freedom, to protect the right of all citizens to be free from discriminatory treatment based on their religious expression and religious exercise. CLS was instrumental in passage of the federal Equal Access Act of 1984 that protects the right of both religious and LGBT student groups to meet on public secondary school campuses. Equal Access Act (“EAA”), 20 U.S.C. §§ 4071-74. See 128 Cong. Rec. 11784-85 (1982) (Senator Hatfield statement) (recognizing CLS’s role in drafting the EAA). See, e.g., Bd. of Educ. v. Mergens, 496 U.S. 226 (1990) (EAA protects religious student groups’ meetings); Straights and Gays for Equality v. Osseo Area Sch. No. 279, 540 F.3d 911 (8th Cir. 2008) (EAA protects LGBT student groups’ meetings). For forty years, CLS has protected free speech, religious exercise, assembly, and expressive association rights for all citizens, regardless of their race, sex, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status or socioeconomic status.
I. Proposed Rule 8.4(g) should not be adopted by the Montana Supreme Court.

In August 2016, the American Bar Association’s House of Delegates adopted a new disciplinary rule, Model Rule 8.4(g), making it professional misconduct for a lawyer to knowingly engage in harassment or discrimination in conduct related to the practice of law on the basis of eleven protected characteristics.1 Unfortunately, in adopting the new model rule, the ABA largely ignored over 450 comment letters,2 most opposed to the rule change. The ABA’s own Standing Committee on Professional Discipline filed a comment letter3 questioning whether there was a demonstrated need for the rule change and raising concerns about its enforceability (although the Committee dropped its opposition immediately prior to the August 8th vote).

The ABA’s new Model Rule 8.4(g) poses a serious threat to attorneys’ First Amendment rights and should be rejected. If adopted, the proposed rule would have a chilling effect on attorneys’ ability to engage in free speech, religious exercise, assembly, and expressive association in the workplace and the broader public square.

Because no state has adopted ABA Model Rule 8.4(g), the proposed rule has no track record whatsoever. There is no empirical evidence to demonstrate a need in Montana for the adoption of the proposed rule. Nor does it solve a problem that is not already adequately addressed by application of current state disciplinary rules, including the rule that makes it misconduct for a lawyer to engage in conduct that prejudices the administration of justice. Indeed, the fact that Montana has not previously adopted either a similar rule or comment suggests that this is not an issue that needs to be addressed by a black-letter rule on professional conduct.

The ABA argues that twenty-four states and the District of Columbia have adopted black-letter rules dealing with “bias” issues.4 All state black-letter rules are narrower in significant ways than Model Rule 8.4(g)’s expansive scope. Examples of the differences between state black-letter rules and Model Rule 8.4(g)’s expansive scope include the following:

- Many states’ black-letter rules apply only to unlawful discrimination and require that another tribunal find that an attorney has engaged in unlawful discrimination before the disciplinary process can be instigated;

- Many states limit their rules to “conduct in the course of representing a client,” in contrast to Model Rule 8.4(g)’s expansive scope of “conduct related to the practice of law;”

- Many states require that the misconduct be prejudicial to the administration of justice, unlike Model Rule 8.4(g);

- Almost no state black-letter rule enumerates all eleven of Model Rule 8.4(g)’s protected characteristics;

- No black-letter rule utilizes Model Rule 8.4(g)’s “circular non-protection” for “legitimate advocacy . . . consistent with these rules.”

A. Model Rule 8.4(g) operates as a speech code for attorneys.

There are many areas of concern with the new rule. Perhaps the most troubling is the likelihood that the new rule will be used to chill lawyers’ expression of disfavored political, social, and religious viewpoints on various political, social, and religious issues. Because of the importance of lawyers as spokespersons and leaders in any political, social, or religious movement, a rule that threatens to discipline a lawyer for his or her speech on such issues should be rejected as a serious detriment to freedom of speech, free exercise of religion, and freedom of political belief in a diverse society that continually births movements for justice in a variety of contexts.

Two renowned constitutional scholars have written about their concerns regarding the chilling effect of ABA Model Rule 8.4(g) on attorneys’ freedom of speech. Professor Ronald Rotunda, who authored a treatise on American constitutional law,\(^5\) also wrote the ABA’s treatise July 16, 2015, http://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/professional_responsibility/language_choice_narrative_with_appendices_final.authcheckdam.pdf. Twelve states have adopted a comment, but not a black-letter rule, while fourteen states have neither adopted a rule nor a comment addressing “bias” issues. The fact that Montana has not adopted a rule or a comment suggests that this is not an issue that needs to be addressed by a black-letter rule on professional conduct.

\(^5\) Professor Rotunda is the well-known author of textbooks and treatises on constitutional law. See, e.g., AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL LAW: THE SUPREME COURT IN AMERICAN HISTORY, VOLUME I – on legal ethics. He explained in a piece for The Wall Street Journal entitled “The ABA Overrules the First Amendment” that:

In the case of rule 8.4(g), the standard, for lawyers at least, apparently does not include the First Amendment right to free speech. Consider the following form of “verbal” conduct when one lawyer tells another, in connection with a case, “I abhor the idle rich. We should raise capital gains taxes.” The lawyer has just violated the ABA rule by manifesting bias based on socioeconomic status.

Professor Rotunda also recently published an extensive critique of Model Rule 8.4(g), entitled “The ABA Decision to Control What Lawyers Say: Supporting ‘Diversity’ But Not Diversity of Thought,” which is attached as Appendix 3 to this letter. His analysis is essential to understanding the threat the new rule poses to attorneys’ freedom of speech.

Influential First Amendment scholar and editor of The Washington Post’s daily legal blog, The Volokh Conspiracy, UCLA Professor Eugene Volokh has likewise described the new rule as a speech code for lawyers, explaining:

Or say that you’re at a lawyer social activity, such as a local bar dinner, and say that you get into a discussion with people around the table about such matters — Islam, evangelical Christianity, black-on-black crime, illegal immigration, differences between the sexes, same-sex marriage, restrictions on the use of bathrooms, the alleged misdeeds of the 1 percent, the cultural causes of poverty in many households, and so on. One of the people is offended and files a bar complaint.
Again, you’ve engaged in “verbal . . . conduct” that the bar may see as “manifest[ing] bias or prejudice” and thus as “harmful.” This was at a “social activit[y] in connection with the practice of law.” The state bar, if it adopts this rule, might thus discipline you for your “harassment.”

The concerns of these two leading First Amendment scholars should raise a significant red flag regarding adoption of proposed Rule 8.4(g). The proposed rule would create a multitude of potential problems for attorneys who serve on nonprofit boards, speak on panels, teach at law schools, or otherwise engage in public discussions of current political, social, and religious issues.

1. By expanding its coverage to include all “conduct related to the practice of law,” the proposed Rule 8.4(g) encompasses nearly everything a lawyer does, including conduct and speech protected by the First Amendment.

Proposed Rule 8.4(g) raises troubling new concerns for every attorney because it explicitly applies to all of an attorney’s “conduct related to the practice of law.” Comment [4] to ABA Model Rule 8.4(g) explicitly delineates Model Rule 8.4(g)’s extensive reach: “Conduct related to the practice of law includes representing clients; interacting with witnesses, coworkers, court personnel, lawyers and others while engaged in the practice of law, operating or managing a law firm or law practice; and participating in bar association, business or social activities in connection with the practice of law.” (Emphasis supplied.)

Note that Model Rule 8.4(g) greatly expands upon the predecessor Comment [3] that accompanied ABA Model Rule 8.4(d) from 1998 through July 2016. First, Model Rule 8.4(g) has an accompanying comment that makes clear that “conduct” encompasses “speech,” when it states that “discrimination includes harmful verbal or physical conduct that manifests bias or prejudice towards others.” Second, Model Rule 8.4(g) is much broader in scope than predecessor Comment [3], which applied only to conduct “in the course of representing a client.” Instead, the ABA’s Model Rule 8.4(g) applies to all “conduct related to the practice of law,” including “business or social activities in connection with the practice of law.” As will be discussed below, this is a breathtaking expansion of the previous comment’s scope. Third, predecessor Comment [3] applied only to “actions when prejudicial to the administration of justice.” By deleting that

10 The October 27, 2016, Order “In Re the Rules of Professional Conduct,” AF 09-0688, speaks only of adopting proposed Rule 8.4(g) and does not mention the new Comments [3], [4], & [5] that were adopted by the ABA when it adopted Model Rule 8.4(g). Nonetheless, it seems reasonable to examine these Comments because it seems completely predictable that they will be given weight in future interpretation of proposed Rule 8.4(g), if it were adopted. These new comments are found in Appendix 1.

11 Comment [3] to Model Rule 8.4(d) was in place from 1998-2016 and is found in the attached Appendix 2.
qualifying phrase, the new Rule 8.4(g) also greatly expands the reach of the rule into attorneys’ lives.

Indeed, the substantive question becomes, what conduct does Rule 8.4(g) not reach? Virtually everything a lawyer does is “conduct related to the practice of law.” Swept up in the rule are dinners, parties, golf outings, conferences, and any other business or social activity that lawyers attend. Most likely, the rule includes all “business or social activities in connection with the practice of law” because there is no real way to delineate between the two. So much of a lawyer’s social life can be viewed as business development and opportunities to cultivate relationships with current clients or gain exposure to new clients.

For example, activities likely to fall within the proposed Rule 8.4(g)’s scope include:

- presenting CLE courses at conferences or through webinars
- teaching law school classes as a faculty or adjunct faculty member
- publishing law review articles, blogposts, and op-eds
- giving guest lectures at law school classes
- speaking at public events
- participating in panel discussions that touch on controversial political, religious, and social viewpoints
- serving on the boards of various religious or other charitable institutions
- lending informal legal advice to non-profits
- serving at legal aid clinics
- serving political or social action organizations
- lobbying for or against various legal issues
- serving one’s religious congregation
- serving one’s alma mater college, if it is a religious institution of higher education
- serving religious ministries that assist prisoners, the underprivileged, the homeless, the abused, substance abusers, and other vulnerable populations
- serving on the boards of fraternities or sororities
- volunteering with or working for political parties
- working with social justice organizations
- any pro bono work that involves advocating for or against controversial socioeconomic, religious, social, or political issues

Lest these examples seem unlikely, recall that the nationally acclaimed Atlanta fire chief, Chief Kelvin Cochran, lost his job in 2014 because he published a book based on lessons he taught his Sunday School class at his church, which included his traditional religious beliefs regarding sexual conduct and marriage. In moving testimony before a congressional committee this summer, former Chief Cochran described the racial harassment he experienced in the 1980s when he joined the Shreveport Fire Department. But as he notes, he was never fired for his race.
Instead, he was fired in 2014 for his religious beliefs. His testimony is a sober reminder that in America today people are losing their jobs because their religious beliefs are disfavored by some government entities.12

2. Attorneys could be subject to discipline for guidance they offer when serving on the boards of their religious congregations, religious schools and colleges, and other religious ministries. Many lawyers sit on the boards of their religious congregations, religious schools and colleges, and other religious non-profit ministries. These ministries provide incalculable good to people in their local communities, as well as nationally and internationally. But they also face innumerable legal questions and regularly turn to the lawyers serving as volunteers on their boards for pro bono guidance.

As a volunteer on religious institutions’ boards, a lawyer may not be “representing a client,” but may nonetheless be engaged in “conduct related to the practice of law.” For example, a lawyer may be asked to help craft her church’s policy regarding whether its clergy will perform same-sex marriages or whether it will allow receptions for same-sex marriages in its facilities. A religious college may ask a lawyer who serves on its board of trustees to review its housing policy or its student code of conduct. Drafting and reviewing legal policies may qualify as “conduct related to the practice of law,” but surely a lawyer should not be disciplined for volunteer legal work she performs for her church or her alma mater.

The rule will do immense harm to the good work that many lawyers do for religious institutions. A lawyer should not have to worry about whether her volunteer work treads too closely to the vague line of “conduct related to the practice of law.” Because proposed Rule 8.4(g) seems to prohibit lawyers providing counsel, whether paid or volunteer, in these contexts, the rule will have a stifling and chilling effect on lawyer’s free speech and free exercise of religion when serving religious congregations and institutions.

3. Attorneys’ public speech on political, social, cultural, and religious topics would be subject to discipline. Lawyers often are asked to speak to community groups, classes, and other audiences about current legal issues of the day. They frequently participate in panel discussions about the pros and cons of various legal questions regarding sensitive social and political issues. Of course, lawyers are asked to speak because they are lawyers. A lawyer’s speaking engagements often have a dual purpose of increasing the lawyer’s visibility and creating new business opportunities.

Writing -- “Verbal conduct” includes written communication. Is a law professor or adjunct faculty member subject to discipline for a law review article that explores controversial topics, uses controversial words to make a point, or expresses unpopular viewpoints? Must lawyers forswear writing blogposts or letters to the editor because someone may file a complaint with the bar because that person perceives the speech as “manifest[ing] bias or prejudice towards others”? If so, public discourse and civil society will suffer from the ideological paralysis that proposed Rule 8.4(g) will impose on lawyers, who are often at the forefront of new movements and unpopular causes.

Speaking -- It would seem that all public speaking by lawyers on legal issues falls within proposed Rule 8.4(g)’s prohibition. But even if some public speaking were to fall inside the line of “conduct related to the practice of law,” how is a lawyer to know which speech is safe and which will subject him to potential discipline? May a lawyer participate in a panel discussion only if all the lawyers on the panel speak in favor of the inclusion of “sexual orientation” or “gender identity” as a protected category in a nondiscrimination law being debated in the state legislature? Is a lawyer subject to discipline if she testifies before a city council against amending a nondiscrimination law to add any or all the protected characteristics listed in Model Rule 8.4(g)? Is a candidate for office subject to discipline for socio-economic discrimination if she proposes that only low-income students be allowed to participate in government tuition assistance programs?

The proposed rule creates a cloud of doubt that will inevitably chill lawyers’ public speech on one side of these current political and social issues, while simultaneously creating no disincentive for lawyers who speak on the opposing side of these controversies. Sadly, we live at a time when many people, including lawyers, are willing to suppress the free speech of those with whom they disagree. At a time when freedom of speech needs more breathing space, not less, proposed Rule 8.4(g) chills attorneys’ speech.

4. Attorneys’ membership in religious, social, or political organizations may be subject to discipline. Proposed Rule 8.4(g) raises severe doubts about the ability of lawyers to participate in political, social, or religious organizations that promote traditional values regarding sexual conduct and marriage. Last year, the California Supreme Court adopted a disciplinary rule that prohibits all California state judges from participating in Boy Scouts because of the organization’s teaching regarding sexual conduct. Calif. Sup. Ct., Media Release, “Supreme Court Eliminates Ethics Exception that Permitted Judges to Belong to Nonprofit Youth Organizations that Discriminate,” Jan. 23, 2015, available at http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/sc15-Jan_23.pdf.

Would proposed Rule 8.4(g) subject lawyers to disciplinary action for participating with their children in youth organizations that teach traditional values regarding sexual conduct or marriage? Would it subject lawyers to disciplinary action for belonging to political organizations that advocate for laws that promote traditional values regarding sexual conduct and marriage? These are serious concerns that mitigate against adoption of proposed Rule 8.4(g).

Proposed Rule 8.4(g) raises additional concerns about whether an attorney may be disciplined for her membership in a religious organization that chooses its leaders according to its religious beliefs, or that holds to the religious belief that marriage is only between a man and a woman, or numerous other religious beliefs implicated by the proposed rule’s strictures. For example, according to some government officials, the right of a religious group to choose its leaders according to its religious beliefs is “religious discrimination.” But it is simple common sense and basic religious liberty that a religious organization’s leaders should agree with its religious beliefs. As the Supreme Court explained in a recent unanimous opinion:

The interest of society in the enforcement of employment discrimination statutes is undoubtedly important. But so too is the interest of religious groups in choosing who will preach their beliefs, teach their faith, and carry out their mission. When a minister who has been fired sues her church alleging that her termination was discriminatory, the First Amendment has struck the balance for us. The church must be free to choose those who will guide it on its way.

B. Proposed Rule 8.4(g) would institutionalize viewpoint discrimination against many lawyers’ public speech on current political, religious, and social issues.

As seen in the ABA’s Comment [4], Proposed Rule 8.4(g) explicitly protects some viewpoints over others by allowing lawyers to “engage in conduct undertaken to promote diversity and inclusion without violating this Rule by, for example, implementing initiatives aimed at recruiting, hiring, retaining and advancing diverse employees or sponsoring diverse law student organizations.” Because “conduct” includes “verbal conduct,” the proposed rule would impermissibly favor speech that “promote[s] diversity and inclusion” over speech that does not.

But that is the very definition of viewpoint discrimination. The government cannot pass laws that allow citizens, including lawyers, to express one viewpoint on a particular subject but penalize citizens, including lawyers, for expressing an opposing viewpoint on the same subject. It is axiomatic that viewpoint discrimination is “an egregious form of content discrimination,” and that “[t]he government must abstain from regulating speech when the specific motivating ideology or the opinion or perspective of the speaker is the rationale for the restriction.”_ Rosenberger v. Rector & Visitors of Univ. of Virginia_, 515 U.S. 819, 829 (1995). Proposed Rule 8.4(g) explicitly promotes one viewpoint over others.
Even more importantly, what speech or action does or does not “promote diversity and inclusion” completely depends on the beholder’s subjective beliefs. Where one person sees inclusion, another may see exclusion. Where one person sees the promotion of diversity, another may equally sincerely see the promotion of conformity, uniformity, or orthodoxy.

Because enforcement of Rule 8.4(g) gives governmental actors unbridled discretion to determine which speech is permissible and which is impermissible, which speech “promote[s] diversity and inclusion” and which does not, the rule clearly countenances viewpoint discrimination based on governmental actors’ subjective biases. Courts have recognized that giving any government official such unbridled discretion to suppress citizens’ free speech is unconstitutional. See, e.g., Child Evangelism Fellowship v. Montgomery Cty. Pub. Sch., 457 F.3d 376, 384 (4th Cir. 2006).

C. A troubling gap exists between protected and unprotected speech under proposed Rule 8.4(g).

Proposed Rule 8.4(g) cursorily states that it “does not preclude legitimate advice or advocacy consistent with these rules.” But the qualifying phrase “consistent with these rules” makes Rule 8.4(g) utterly circular. Like the proverbial dog chasing its tail, Rule 8.4(g) protects “legitimate advice or advocacy” only if it is “consistent with” Rule 8.4(g). Speech is permitted by Rule 8.4(g) if it is permitted by Rule 8.4(g).

This circularity itself compounds the threat proposed Rule 8.4(g) poses to attorneys’ freedom of speech. The epitome of an unconstitutionally vague rule, Rule 8.4 violates the Fourteenth Amendment as well as the First Amendment. Again, who decides what speech is permissible? By what standards? It is not good for the profession or for a free society for lawyers to be potentially subject to disciplinary action every time they speak or write on a topic that may cause someone to disagree and file a disciplinary complaint to silence the attorney.

II. Significant Modifications Would Be Needed to Proposed Rule 8.4(g) Before Adoption.

A. Proposed Rule 8.4(g)’s serious problems must be remedied before further consideration.

Because an empirical need for its adoption has not been demonstrated, the Montana Supreme Court should not adopt Model Rule 8.4(g). But if efforts to adopt proposed Rule 8.4(g) were continued, several modifications would be essential in order to protect attorneys’ First Amendment rights, including:

1. In the first sentence, delete “in conduct related to the practice of law” and substitute language from predecessor Comment [3], which applied, first, to conduct “in the course of representing a client” and, second, “when such conduct is prejudicial to the administration of justice.”
2. Anchor the definitions of “discrimination” and “harassment,” by adding the sentence: “The substantive law of antidiscrimination and anti-harassment statutes and case law determines the conduct to which paragraph (g) applies.”

3. Include the Supreme Court’s definition of “harassment” in order to avoid violating the First Amendment, by adding the following sentence: “The term ‘harassment’ shall be defined, in accordance with the United States Supreme Court’s decision in Davis v. Monroe Cty. Bd. of Educ., 526 U.S. 629, 633 (1999), as conduct that is so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive that it effectively bars the victim’s access to the administration of justice.”

4. Provide explicit protection for lawyers’ freedoms of speech, assembly, expressive association, religious exercise, and press, by adding the following sentence: “This paragraph does not apply to speech or conduct undertaken by a lawyer because of sincerely held religious beliefs, or speech or conduct otherwise protected by the First Amendment or applicable federal or state laws.”

5. Modify the last sentence to read: “Advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate this paragraph.” Note that this modification deletes the modifier “legitimate,” because it gives a government actor unconstitutional unbridled discretion to determine whether advocacy is “legitimate” or not “legitimate.” Such unbridled discretion violates the First Amendment’s prohibition on viewpoint discrimination, as well as the Fourteenth Amendment’s prohibition on laws that are unconstitutionally vague. Similarly, the deletion of the phrase “consistent with these rules” eliminates the sentence’s circularity, which is unconstitutional because it gives a government actor unbridled discretion in determining which advocacy is “consistent with these rules,” and which is not. Again, this unbridled discretion violates the First Amendment’s prohibition on viewpoint discrimination and the Fourteenth Amendment’s prohibition on laws that are unconstitutionally vague.

With those modifications, the rule would read (additions underlined and deletions in brackets):

“It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to: . . .

“(g) engage in conduct, in the course of representing a client, that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is harassment or discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status or socioeconomic status when such conduct is prejudicial to the administration of justice [in conduct related to the practice of law]. This paragraph does not apply to speech or conduct undertaken by a lawyer because of sincerely held religious beliefs, or speech or conduct otherwise protected by the First Amendment or applicable federal or state laws. This paragraph does not limit the ability of a lawyer to accept, decline, or withdraw from a representation in accordance with Rule1.16. Advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate this paragraph. [This paragraph does not preclude legitimate advice or advocacy consistent with these rules.] The substantive law of antidiscrimination and anti-harassment statues and case law determines the conduct to which paragraph (g) applies. The term “harassment” shall be defined in accordance with the United States Supreme Court’s decision in Davis v. Monroe Cty. Bd. of Educ., 526 U.S. 629 (1999), as conduct that is so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive that it effectively bars the victim’s access to the administration of justice.

B. The ABA’s new Comments accompanying Model Rule 8.4(g) are seriously flawed.

CLS does not recommend that the proposed Rule 8.4(g) include the ABA’s new Comment [3], Comment [4], and Comment [5]. But if those comments were added, several additional modifications would be necessary, including:

1. In Comment [3], delete the sentence stating that “discrimination includes harmful verbal or physical conduct that manifests bias or prejudice towards others.” Several of these terms are unconstitutionally vague and give government actors unbridled discretion in enforcement of the rule. Specifically, what is the standard for determining what “verbal or physical conduct” is “harmful” or “manifests bias or prejudice”?

2. Comment [3] threatens attorneys’ First Amendment rights because “verbal conduct” is simply another term for “speech.” Therefore, delete the phrases “verbal conduct” and “derogatory or demeaning verbal conduct.” By deleting these phrases, the current second, third, and fourth sentences are tightened to reduce redundancy and to avoid infringing on speech by focusing on prohibiting actual physical conduct. The three sentences are reduced to one sentence which reads: “Harassment includes sexual harassment, such as unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other unwelcome physical conduct of a sexual nature.”

3. Because the rule no longer applies to all “conduct related to the practice of law,” delete the first sentence of Comment [4]. The phrase “conduct related to the practice of law” particularly threatens the First Amendment because Comment [4] had interpreted “conduct related to the practice of law” to include “participating in bar association, business or social activities in connection with the practice of law,” making the rule applicable to most, if not all, that a lawyer does.

4. Delete the second sentence of Comment [4] because it violates the First Amendment’s basic prohibition on viewpoint discrimination by stating that: “Lawyers may engage in conduct undertaken to promote diversity and inclusion without violating this Rule by, for example, implementing initiatives aimed at recruiting, hiring, retaining and advancing diverse employees or sponsoring diverse law student organizations.”
5. Delete “alone” from the first sentence in Comment [5] (which is now Comment [4]), so that an attorney is not subject to discipline for exercising peremptory challenges.

With these modifications, the Comments would read as follows:

“Comment [3] Discrimination and harassment by lawyers in violation of paragraph (g) undermines confidence in the legal profession and the legal system. The term “harassment” is defined, in accordance with the United States Supreme Court’s decision in Davis v. Monroe Cty. Bd. of Educ., 526 U.S. 629, 633 (1999), as conduct that is so severe, pervasive, and objectively offensive that it effectively bars the victim’s access to the administration of justice. Harassment includes sexual harassment, such as unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other unwelcome physical conduct of a sexual nature. The substantive law of antidiscrimination and anti-harassment statutes and case law determines the conduct to which paragraph (g) applies.13

“Comment [4] A trial judge’s finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not establish a violation of paragraph (g). A lawyer does not violate paragraph (g) by limiting the scope or subject matter of the lawyer’s practice or by limiting the lawyer’s practice to members of underserved populations in accordance with these Rules and other law. A lawyer may charge and collect reasonable fees and expenses for a representation. Rule 1.5(a). Lawyers also should be mindful of their professional obligations under Rule 6.1 to provide legal services to those who are unable to pay, and their obligation under Rule 6.2 not to avoid appointments from a tribunal except for good cause. See Rule 6.2(a), (b) and (c). A lawyer’s representation of a client does not constitute an endorsement by the lawyer of the client’s views or activities. See Rule 1.2(b).”

Conclusion

Because proposed Rule 8.4(g) would have a chilling effect on attorneys’ First Amendment rights, it should not be adopted. Attorneys must remain free to engage in speech, religious exercise, assembly, and expressive association in their workplaces and the public square.

Because no state has adopted ABA Model Rule 8.4(g), the proposed rule has no track record. There is no empirical evidence documenting that the Montana legal profession needs the proposed rule. Nor does the proposed rule solve a problem that is not already adequately addressed by application of current state disciplinary rules, including the rule that makes it misconduct for a lawyer to engage in conduct that prejudices the administration of justice. Indeed, the fact that Montana has not previously adopted such a rule or comment suggests that 13 Most of Comment [3] would not be necessary if the proposed Rule 8.4(g) were modified as proposed in Part II.A.

this is not an issue that needs to be addressed by a new black-letter rule. For all of these reasons, we urge that proposed Model Rule 8.4(g) not be adopted.

Appendix 1: ABA Model Rule 8.4(g) and comments adopted August 2016

On August 8, 2016, the ABA House of Delegates adopted new Model Rule 8.4(g) and three accompanying comments, which provide as follows:

It is professional misconduct for a lawyer to: . . .

(g) engage in conduct that the lawyer knows or reasonably should know is harassment or discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, national origin, ethnicity, disability, age, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status or socioeconomic status in conduct related to the practice of law. This paragraph does not limit the ability of a lawyer to accept, decline, or withdraw from a representation in accordance with Rule 1.16. This paragraph does not preclude legitimate advice or advocacy consistent with these rules.

Comment [3] Discrimination and harassment by lawyers in violation of paragraph (g) undermines confidence in the legal profession and the legal system. Such discrimination includes harmful verbal or physical conduct that manifests bias or prejudice towards others. Harassment includes sexual harassment and derogatory or demeaning verbal or physical conduct. Sexual harassment includes unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other unwelcome verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature. The substantive law of antidiscrimination and anti-harassment statutes and case law may guide application of paragraph (g).

Comment [4] Conduct related to the practice of law includes representing clients; interacting with witnesses, coworkers, court personnel, lawyers and others while engaged in the practice of law; operating or managing a law firm or law practice; and participating in bar association, business or social activities in connection with the practice of law. Lawyers may engage in conduct undertaken to promote diversity and inclusion without violating this Rule by, for example, implementing initiatives aimed at recruiting, hiring, retaining and advancing diverse employees or sponsoring diverse law student organizations.

Comment [5] A trial judge’s finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of paragraph (g). A lawyer does not violate paragraph (g) by limiting the scope or subject matter of the lawyer’s practice or by limiting the lawyer’s practice to members of underserved populations in accordance with these Rules and other law. A lawyer may charge and collect reasonable fees and expenses for a representation. Rule 1.5(a). Lawyers also should be mindful of their professional obligations under Rule 6.1 to provide legal services to those who are unable to pay, and their obligation under Rule 6.2 not to avoid appointments from a tribunal except for good cause. See Rule 6.2(a), (b) and (c). A lawyer’s representation of a client does not constitute an endorsement by the lawyer of the client’s views or activities. See Rule 1.2(b).

In 1998, the ABA adopted Comment [3] to Rule 8.4(d), which stated:

[3] A lawyer who, in the course of representing a client, knowingly manifests by words or conduct, bias or prejudice based upon race, sex, religion, national origin, disability, age, sexual orientation or socioeconomic status, violates paragraph (d) when such actions are prejudicial to the administration of justice. Legitimate advocacy respecting the foregoing factors does not violate paragraph (d). A trial judge’s finding that peremptory challenges were exercised on a discriminatory basis does not alone establish a violation of this rule.
